Steven McCarney is an attorney who represents businesses, insurers, property owners, and individuals in complex disputes across a wide variety of civil litigation practice areas. In addition to civil litigation, Steven also practices in the area of Trusts. Steven brings a strategic, solutions-oriented approach to both civil litigation and trusts, helping clients navigate high-stakes situations with practical guidance, thorough preparation, and strong advocacy, both inside and outside the courtroom.

Steven's practice focuses primarily on business law, employment law, and insurance litigation, with an emphasis on coverage and real property disputes, construction litigation, contractor-related matters, contracts, and trusts. He regularly handles all phases of litigation, from case evaluation and strategy development through discovery, motion practice, depositions, hearings, and settlement negotiations. Clients value Steven's responsiveness, analytical mindset, and commitment to advancing their interests efficiently and effectively.

Prior to joining DeWitt, Steven represented clients in a broad range of civil litigation matters, including insurance, construction, business, employment, banking, drainage, and personal injury. He also represented clients in trust, estate, and business planning matters. He practiced complex railroad litigation in state and federal courts nationwide, representing railroad employees in injury and whistleblower claims.

Steven has experience appearing before state and federal courts in multiple jurisdictions and has argued before appellate courts, including the North Dakota Supreme Court. His broad litigation background enables him to approach disputes with a comprehensive understanding of risk, strategy, and client objectives.

Steven was drawn to the practice of law by a desire to advocate for others and remains passionate about helping clients navigate difficult legal challenges through thoughtful counsel and effective representation.
