Terry Wagener represents businesses and individuals in complex commercial disputes, insurance coverage matters, and real estate litigation. With decades of experience in state and federal courts, he is recognized for combining strong trial advocacy with a pragmatic approach that frequently leads to early and cost-effective resolutions.

Terry's practice focuses on business disputes involving contract performance, construction conflicts, employment agreements, and shareholder or partnership issues. He also handles matters involving family farm partnerships and represents life and disability insurers. Clients rely on his ability to anticipate opposing strategies, position cases for favorable outcomes, and protect long-term business interests.

In addition to his litigation work, Terry advises businesses on how to minimize risk and avoid disputes before they arise. His experience spans appearances before multiple U.S. District Courts across the Midwest as well as the Seventh and Eighth Circuits, giving him the perspective to handle cases with regional and national implications
