Joe is an attorney specializing in Intellectual Property law and Civil Litigation. Much of his civil litigation work focuses on patent, employment, and real estate litigation. Before joining DeWitt, Joe gained valuable experience while serving as a judicial extern and law clerk. The roles provided him with valuable insights into the legal system and allowed him to work closely with esteemed judges, while refining his legal research, writing, and analytical skills.

With his legal knowledge, engineering background, and clerkship experience, he is well-equipped to provide guidance and representation to clients in matters related to intellectual property, real estate law, or employment law. As an attorney, he combines his legal knowledge, engineering background, and passion for helping others to provide exceptional legal representation.

Much of his life is characterized by teamwork, leadership, and philanthropy with 12 years of experience as a football player and three years as a Division I rugby player. He ended his career after finishing his tenure as the Princeton Rugby Fundraising Chair. He continues to foster his competitive spirit outside of the courtroom by pursuing competitive powerlifting in his spare time.
